WELCOME TO METRO.US

JOE PANTORNO, SPORTS EDITOR

Former NYPD Commissioner William J. Bratton implored New Yorkers not to live in fear after Tuesday's horrific terrorist attack on Chambers Street. The 47th annual New York City Marathon this weekend will provide the residents of this great city with a chance show that we are not going anywhere as an estimated 50,000 participants are expected to take part in one of the most grueling sporting events on Earth." metro.us

NEW JERSEY RESIDENTS RECEIVE RACIST MAILER

1 Residents in Edison, New Jersey, were sent racist Make Edison Great Again campaign mailers targeting Asians and Indians and urging the community to deport two Asian school board candidates. "The Chinese and Indians are taking over our town!" the postcard reads. "Chinese school! Indian School! Cricket fields! Enough is Enough!" Featured on the postcard mailed to Edison residents are pictures of two board of education candidates Jerry Shi and Falguni Patel with the word "deport" covering the lower portion of their pictures. The racist postcard urges Edison residents to "stop" the two school board candidates from "taking over" the school. The back of the card says such things as, "Stop the multiple families living in the same house!" and "Stop wasting school holidays!"

POWELL NOMINATED TO LEAD CENTRAL BANK

2 President Donald Trump tapped Fed Governor Jerome Powell to become head of the U.S. central bank, promoting a soft-spoken centrist to replace Janet Yellen when her term expires in February 2018. Powell, appointed to the Fed board in 2012 by then-President Barack Obama, emerged as Trump's choice from a five-person slate of possible nominees that included Yellen as well as others who would have represented a sharp change in monetary policy. In an announcement at the White House, Trump called Powell a strong, committed and smart leader. "He has proved to be a consensus builder for the sound monetary and financial policy that he believes in ... Based on his record I am confident that Jay has the wisdom and leadership to guide our economy," Trump said as the Fed nominee looked on.

GOTHAMIST, DNAINFO SHUTTING DOWN

4 The Gothamist and DNAinfo news sites shut down on Thursday, putting hundreds of New York City journalists out of work without notice. "Today, I've made the difficult decision to discontinue publishing DNAinfo and Gothamist. Reaching this decision wasn't easy, and it wasn't one I made lightly," Joe Rickets, CEO of TD Ameritrade, told staff in a letter published on the now-defunct news sites. Just last week, Gothamist and DNAinfo combined newsrooms, reportedly in the hope of easing financial challenges. Rickets pointed to these same challenges in his decision to shut down the sites and let go of 115 journalists nationwide. The stories that were on the websites couldn't be seen Thursday afternoon. Instead, readers were redirected to the letter, which went up at 5 p.m., The New York Times reported.

MANAFORT ORDERED TO STAY UNDER HOME ARREST

5 A U.S. judge on Thursday ordered President Donald Trump's former campaign manager Paul Manafort to remain under home arrest and wear an electronic monitoring device for now as he awaits a tentative trial date on money-laundering and other charges. Manafort, who ran Trump's presidential campaign for several months last year, and his associate Richard Gates pleaded not guilty on Monday to a 12-count indictment. The charges include conspiracy to launder money, conspiracy against the United States and failing to register as foreign agents of Ukraine's former pro-Russian government. They are part of Special Counsel Robert Mueller's investigation of alleged Russian efforts to tilt the 2016 election in Trump's favor and into potential collusion by Trump's associates.

Refuse Fascism on right-wing 'civil war' claims of national Nov. 4 protests

"There are a lot of threats and lies being spread by white supremacists and fascists online against our nonviolent Nov. 4 protests," the group said.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
@MetroNewYork
nikki.mascali@metro.us

On Saturday, thousands are expected to participate in Refuse Fascism's nationwide protest to demand the removal of President Donald Trump and Vice President Mike Pence.

Since Metro last spoke with Sunsara Taylor, the group's co-initiator and spokesperson, in early September, right-wing media have hardened the Nov. 4 rallies as the start of a violent civil war, something Taylor debunked.

"There are a lot of threats and lies being spread by white supremacists and fascists online against our nonviolent Nov. 4 protests," she said. "On one level, it lets us know we've struck a chord, and they recognize the strength of what we are doing.

"The bottom line, however, is that we are acting in the interests of humanity and therefore we refuse to be intimidated," she added. "Only the people can stop this regime that is tearing immigrants from their families, reasserting violent white supremacy, attacking women's right to abortion and even birth control, ripping up environmental protections, inflicting genocidal neglect on the people of Puerto Rico and more."

Do you fear retaliation on Nov. 4, especially in the wake of the August violence in Charlottesville, Virginia?

The hideous white supremacy, anti-Semitism and murderous violence in Charlottesville should be taken seriously by all – as should the fact that Trump told the world he saw "fine people" among those wielding torches and chanting Nazi slogans. This should be a wake-up call to millions. Don't sit back as fascism gets consolidated! Come out in the streets in our numbers, in our beautiful diversity, with our love and determination for a better world.

You say the 2018 and 2020 elections are too late to address Trump's administration. Why?

We can't wait until Trump carries out a nuclear strike or until more white supremacist murders take place. If you were more outraged on Nov. 9 last year than you are today, that normalization is having an effect on you, and you need to snap out of it! The lesson of history is that you have to stop fascism before it becomes too late. This is why we must take the responsibility to act now to drive out this regime.

History is filled with examples where people fought against tremendous odds and were victorious. It is also filled with examples of people hoping to wait it out, only to get swallowed up by a horror beyond what they ever imagined. The future is unwritten — which one we get is up to us. I urge everyone to come out this Saturday.

Refuse Fascism's Nov. 4 protest begins in New York City at 42nd Street and Broadway at 2 p.m.

"It lets us know we've struck a chord, and they recognize the strength of what we are doing."
Sunsara Taylor

"The lesson of history is that you have to stop fascism before it becomes too late. This is why we must take the responsibility to act now to drive out this regime," Sunsara Taylor of Refuse Fascism told Metro. PROVIDED

This 12-year-old is trying to break the Guinness Record for making slime

Young Connecticut entrepreneur Madison Greenspan will attempt to make six tons of slime at the Play Fair in New York this weekend.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
@MetroNewYork
nikki.mascali@metro.us

Don't let Madison Greenspan's age fool you. Not only did this 12-year-old turn her slime-making hobby into a lucrative business, she's now attempting to break a Guinness World Record by making six tons of slime at this weekend's Play Fair at the Jacob K. Javits Convention Center.

"I'm definitely feeling very nervous, but really excited," the Fairfield, Connecticut, resident told Metro. "I don't think a few years ago I would ever be able to do anything this big and this interesting. There's a lot that could go wrong — there's a lot that may go wrong — but I'm definitely very excited."

Greenspan, who's in seventh grade, got into slime after her classmates started bringing it to school.

"I really loved to create my own using DIYs and all that stuff, so I came home and asked if we had any glue," she said. Glue, along with baking soda and other components are used to make slime.

When she couldn't find the glue at home or anywhere, Greenspan realized there was a "worldwide problem for making slime" and decided to create her own brand. And Maddie Rae's Slime Glue was born — thanks to a little help from SCS Direct, a consumer products company founded by her dad, Howard.

"What's different about my glue is that there were no gallons of clear glue, and there are so many things you can do — you can make crystal-clear slime and add whatever you like with it," Greenspan explained. "It's a sensory toy, and I think my favorite is definitely clear slime. It's really interesting because you can add charms, glitter, and it's just really pretty slime."

Although the most slime Greenspan has made thus far was 300 pounds, she enlisted about 85 people to help her break the Guinness World Record of 11,024 pounds on Saturday.

"There's definitely a lot of things that you have to take into account when you're making slime," she said. "Trouble that we had when we were making the 300 pounds of slime is that you can get stuck in the slime, so that's a really big issue."

Greenspan's attempt will be live streamed on her website, slimemaking.com, starting at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday.

MADISON HAS ENLISTED ABOUT 85 PEOPLE TO HELP HER BREAK THE GUINNESS WORLD RECORD ON SATURDAY.

THE CURRENT GUINNESS WORLD RECORD FOR THE LARGEST SLIME IS 11,024 POUNDS.

Madison Greenspan, who lives in Fairfield, Connecticut, created Maddie Rae's Slime Glue after being unable to find any to make her own slime. PROVIDED

President Trump's call for the death penalty for Sayfullo Saipov was irresponsible, experts say

Sayfullo Saipov might face the death penalty. GETTY IMAGES

The president's outspokenness could harm the integrity of the justice system, according to legal analysts.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Will the New York City terrorist get the death penalty?

That's the question many are wondering after Sayfullo Saipov, 29, was charged with terrorism for Tuesday's attack in which eight people were killed and a dozen injured.

President Donald Trump took to Twitter Wednesday night and Thursday to voice his thoughts on Saipov's fate. Though Trump backed off of his push to send Saipov to Guantanamo Bay, he reiterated his belief that the Uzbek native should get the death penalty — a comment that concerned Donna Lieberman, executive director of the New York Civil Liberties Union.

"His call for the death penalty is among the most irresponsible things he's said yet," she said. "It undermines and shows a lack of understanding and respect for our judicial system, which is predicated on a fair process for everybody who stands accused of a crime."

New York state does not currently have the death penalty — New York Court of Appeals ruled the state's death penalty statute unconstitutional in 2007 — but terrorism charges fall under federal, not state, jurisdiction, meaning the federal death penalty could still be carried out.

"Even in the federal system, where there is the possibility of a death penalty, the only decision that needs to be made or can be made right now is whether to seek it," Lieberman said. "There's a process in the Department of Justice for that and there is a whole judicial process that has to go on before you get to that question."

Other law experts shared Lieberman's sentiments. In response to Trump's first tweet on the issue, in which he said, "NYC terrorist was happy as he asked to hang ISIS flag in his hospital room. He killed 8 people, badly injured 12. SHOULD GET DEATH PENALTY," Andrew C. McCarthy, former assistant United States attorney in the Southern District of New York for 18 years, felt the need to respond.

"Mr. President, we all know he should get the death penalty," McCarthy tweeted. "But when you say it, it makes it harder for DOJ to make that happen."

There is a precedent for a federal capital punishment charge being administered in a state without the death penalty — the case of Boston Marathon bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev.

Though Trump emphasized speed in his tweet as a reason to push for the death penalty, Tsarnaev's process wasn't that quick: Tsarnaev was captured on April 19, 2013, plead not guilty to 30 federal counts on July 10, 2013, and was sentenced to death two years later, on May 15, 2015, and he remains on federal death row today, awaiting that fate for what experts say will be the next 10 years or more.

Republicans unveil tax-cut bill, but the hard work awaits

House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi speaks during a news conference where congressional Democrats reacted to the new tax reform proposal. GETTY IMAGES

Investors cautioned the plan was preliminary, and it was too soon to gauge the effect on specific industries.

U.S. House of Representatives Republicans unveiled long-delayed legislation on Thursday to deliver deep tax cuts that President Donald Trump has promised, setting off a frantic race in Congress to give him his first major legislative victory.

The 429-page bill, representing what would be the largest overhaul of the U.S. tax system since the 1980s, called for slashing the corporate tax rate to 20 percent from 35 percent, cutting tax rates on individuals and families and ending certain tax breaks for companies and individuals.

Congressional passage of this legislation that would affect nearly every U.S. company and family was far from certain, and some business groups quickly came out against it. Contentious provisions will test Republicans, who control the White House and both chambers of Congress but have been unable to deliver any major legislative achievements for Trump since the businessman-turned-politician became president in January.

A number of provisions would hit taxpayers in Democratic-leaning states hardest, like rolling back deductions for state and local taxes and cutting the popular mortgage interest deduction.

The legislation, called the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act, produces new advantages for rich Americans through lowered corporate taxes, phasing out the estate tax and dumping the alternative minimum tax.

"This is a very important and special moment for our country, for all Americans. Are we going to let the defenders of the status quo win and see our country continue down this downward spiral?" Republican House Speaker Paul Ryan asked, despite data showing about eight straight years of economic growth.

Meeting with Ryan and other key House Republicans, Trump told the lawmakers he was counting on them to maintain the momentum for tax cuts, and repeated his request that Congress send him the legislation to sign into law by Thanksgiving.

That is an ambitious timetable for such a long, multifaceted piece of legislation that will face a ferocious lobbying battle among business sectors affected by the bill and fierce opposition from many Democrats.

The bill presented by the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee would consolidate the current number of tax brackets to four from seven: 12 percent, 25 percent, 35 percent and 39.6 percent.

The National Association of Home Builders blasted the legislation, saying it would damage home prices and punish homeowners.

The bill would repeal the existing deduction for state and local income and sales taxes, and would cap the deduction for state and local property taxes at $10,000. Those provisions would most affect Americans in higher-tax states such as California, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

The bill's architects avoided one showdown by deciding not to make changes to the popular tax-deferred 401(k) retirement-savings program.

With Democrats solidly opposed to legislation they see as a giveaway to corporations and the rich that would expand the federal deficit, Republicans can ill afford to lose many in their own ranks as they aim to pass the bill in the coming weeks. REUTERS

Slaying the patriarchy with Sarah Polley

"Alias Grace" follows the true story of Grace Marks (Sarah Gadon) — it's less of a whodunnit and more of an exploration of Marks herself. JAN THIJS/NETFLIX

Chatting with the woman behind Netflix's latest, "Alias Grace," about her new miniseries, Harvey Weinstein and representation.

RACHAEL VAUGHAN CLEMMONS
rachael.clemmons@metro.us

Sarah Polley has been busy. The talented multi-hyphenate — actress, director, writer and political activist — is on the press trail for "Alias Grace," a Netflix miniseries based on the Margaret Atwood novel of the same name. "It's been a really awesome experience to finally see it come to fruition," the 38-year-old tells me over the phone. "It's been great."

The Toronto native read the novel as a teen and decided then and there to adapt it — at the ripe age of 17. After finally getting the rights at age 30, her work is premiering on Netflix today.

Of course, it would be natural to expect "Alias Grace" to be more of the same, Atwood-adaptation-wise — especially because the series comes less than a year after the critically lauded "The Handmaid's Tale." But where "THT" follows women in an uncertain dystopian future, "Alias Grace" explores a true story with consequential roots in the past.

"Grace" is a fictional take on the true story of Grace Marks, an Irish immigrant and domestic servant who was convicted of murdering her employer and his housekeeper/lover in 1840s Canada. But the miniseries is less focused on whether or not she did it than on who Grace Marks actually was.

"She's one of these women that a lot of people projected onto," Polley says. "She was a beautiful 16-year-old girl, she was completely fascinating to people. Men were in love with her and projected on to her that she must be innocent. A lot of people decided she must be guilty. The mystery is who she actually was, and what her voyage was. She never got to speak for herself."

The series is part of a trend — timely and propitious stories about women fighting against patriarchal structures are striking a chord now more than ever. "We're in such a precarious moment right now — for women and for anybody who has been marginalized," Polley says. "It's a really scary moment."

Polley wrote about her own experience fighting patriarchal structures, detailing a story of her own run-in at age 19 with disgraced producer and alleged serial sexual assaulter Harvey Weinstein. "It's not just our industry, it's all industries," she says. "It's not just gender, it's also race and class. We live with power structures and an economic system that is based on inequality and injustice and marginalization. Being conscious of the ways that we are complicit, in respect to all of those things, is really important. It's the first step in a much bigger conversation." She admits that it's taken herself a long time — "way too long" — to acknowledge racial disparities, especially in media. "We're all kind of complicit in a system that's pretty racist and discriminatory on many levels," she says. She notes that taking a look at her own films, including the not-so-diverse "Take This Waltz," and seeing the lack of diversity in them was a particular low point.

GETTY

"I had a real awakening, which continues," she says. "I don't think as a middle-class white person you're ever going to get to the bottom of your own ignorance. You have to keep trying, and you just keep asking questions. It has to be part of my work to get better."

Polley — who has attributed her late onset wokeness largely to watching the Black Lives Matter movement — says her next project will bring together a collective of women and give a voice to their stories. She wants to create space in the industry for people of color to tell their own stories, in their own way. "I don't think it's appropriate for me as a white filmmaker to decide to write stories for people from other communities," she says. "But to actually create a space where they can write their own stories, then help bring that to the screen is really exciting to me."

LEXINGTON PLASTIC SURGEONS

To Bob or not to Bob

A case for — and against — Joyce's new boyfriend in "Stranger Things 2."

RACHAEL VAUGHAN CLEMMONS
KATE MOONEY

Bob Newby is a new and apparently controversial character in this season of the hit series. NETFLIX

By now, surely, you've binge-watched the second season of "Stranger Things" in its entirety. And naturally, you have some feelings about Joyce's (Winona Ryder) new boyfriend Bob Newby, played by Sean Astin.

Two of Metro's "Stranger Things" fans, Rachael Vaughan Clemmons and Kate Mooney, agree to disagree when it comes to one of the series' newest and (um, spoilers ahead) most dead and demo-dog gobbled up characters. Here's what they think about ol' Bob the Brain.

Rachael Vaughan Clemmons: I love Bob.
Kate Mooney: My first thought was, why would goddess Winona want to make out with Samwise Gamgee? C'mon.
RVC: Winona deserves a Frodo, not a Samwise. As in a main character. Not actual Frodo. Frodo sucks.
KM: She deserves an Aragorn!
RVC: Frodo in the streets, Aragorn in the sheets.
KM: Joyce is a goddess, even though she doesn't know it.
RVC: Bob treated her like a goddess. I got sweet on him once he figured out the tunnel stuff.
KM: I think he was there to make you think, "But why haven't she and Hopper done it yet?!" Also, and this is VERY IMPORTANT: I got a sinister vibe from him early on. I ran into an 11-year-old acquaintance of mine at Fort Greene's The Great PUPkin last Saturday, and we were chatting about "Stranger Things 2." She asked me, straight up, "Is Will's mom's new boyfriend a government agent?" I wouldn't answer because, spoilers, but I was like I FEEL YOU, CHILD.
RVC: That's just because he wears the '80s equivalent to chinos, though. I mean, by the time he died, I was really sad.
KM: Why be sad? He got to be a hero.
RVC: He was so close! He almost made it.
KM: I just read an LA Times article in which, pathetically, Sean Astin says that he asked the Duffer Brothers to make him a hero. He says, "I said to the Duffers from the beginning, 'Please let me do something heroic.' I'm a little boy in my heart, and that's what I want."
RVC: Oh, that is sad.
KM: Winona does not need to bang a man who feels like a little boy in his heart. She already has a demon-possessed little boy to worry about. I get they wanted somebody from an iconic '80s film, but aren't there more attractive '80s icons for Winone to bone?
RVC: Why do you hate Bob, actually, Kate?
KM: He's so corny. And remember when he gave Will the worst advice?
RVC: OK, yes. Maybe he didn't deserve Joyce, but he didn't deserve death!
KM: This season someone needed to die, and he did die for his mistakes. I don't get why fans got so attached to him.
RVC: He proved his worth! When Joyce kind of confided in him, he came through and saved Hopper — so with no Bob, there would be no Hopper. Think about that for a sec.
KM: Bob had to be sacrificed so Winona could get that good police-chief d—k.
RVC: I guess I got attached to Bob the Brain because like Joyce, I too want to be loved.
KM: Do you really want a Bob-type to be your boyfriend, though? Just so you can feel good about yourself?
RVC: I definitely see myself settling in the future so, yes.
KM: I'm glad Bob has helped you with your personal growth.

Is Finding The Best Treatment For Your Knee Arthritis Pain Worth 30 Seconds To You?

What if… there was a way to finally get straight answers about the most cutting-edge medical treatments for knee arthritis available today…

Answers from REAL MEDICAL DOCTORS who are experts in this field…

Doctors that have already treated THOUSANDS of knee arthritis suffers…

Doctors who will tell you exactly what your best options are and what can realistically be expected… without making huge (and false) claims… just to sell a product or service… and then deliver junk that does little or nothing for your pain?

Well… now you can.

Here is how…

NYC Pain MD is a medical clinic with 2 locations in New York City that has medical doctors specially trained in some of the most advanced, cutting edge knee arthritis treatments available today.

And they have put together an information kit that details some of these advanced medical procedures that have already helped thousands.

Including… what you need to know about joint lubricating injections, platelet rich plasma (PRP), stem cell therapy... and more.

This free information kit contains a video and report that will also explain the two arthritis treatments paths you should know about and what "Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology" is and why it has already helped so many arthritis sufferers.

How To Get Your Information Kit…

All you have to do is go to painmdny.com/knee and click the button that says "Click here to get a free knee arthritis treatment info kit."

Rob Reiner and Woody Harrelson's 'LBJ,' and America after JFK

Woody Harrelson as Lyndon B Johnson.
CASTLE ROCK ENTERTAINMENT

"I'd rather not have it than have it this way."

GREGORY WAKEMAN
@MetroNewYork
gregory.wakeman@metro.us

Fact: Rob Reiner is a national treasure. He's the only Hollywood success story that's never had to rely on a sequel. He's jumped from comedy ("This Is Spinal Tap") to coming-of-age ("Stand By Me"), from fantasy ("The Princess Bride") to romantic comedy ("The Sure Thing" & "When Harry Met Sally"), from horror ("Misery") to legal drama ("A Few Good Men"), and defined each genre (P.S. those six are only a small sample of his work).

"LBJ," his latest political drama about Lyndon B. Johnson's sudden ascension to the presidency, was a tricky project for Reiner, in no small part because "I hated him," he says candidly. "I was of draft age in that period and I could've gotten killed in Vietnam."

This movie largely avoids the war, instead focusing on LBJ's deep complexities. "He had a lot of strength; he was like a bull in a china shop," says Reiner. "But he had a tremendous amount of insecurity. I wanted to get into the complexities of his internal workings, and what kind of person he was. To me, this isn't really a biopic. If it was we'd have to show his entire history. I wanted to show this one sliver of what it's like when you have to assume the power of president after you've wanted it your life, but are concerned that people don't love you."

GETTY IMAGES

How does Reiner think "LBJ" is applicable in our current, highly-charged political climate? "You look at this film in context of what a real president was able to accomplish, and [compare it to] that person in the White House today — I don't even call him president; I don't know what he is." But tell us how you really feel!

"One of the things that's been unearthed because of (President Trump's) rise is this incredible cancer and racism, and he gives it a megaphone," Reiner says. "LBJ comes along at this time, and these are issues that have been dealt with in many different films, [but considering] where the country is right now, it takes on a very different perspective."

If anything, the rise of Donald Trump has only added an edge to "LBJ," making it feel more integral than it might have otherwise.

"LBJ" is in cinemas now.

MARVEL

"Thor: Ragnarok"

Director: Taika Waititi
Stars: Chris Hemsworth, Mark Ruffalo, Cate Blanchett
Rating: PG-13

Here's the problem with "Thor: Ragnarok" — it's impossible to give much of a s—t when your lead character can withstand every ferocious hammering and still spit out a (admittedly amusing) one-liner. But the laughs don't compensate for a complete lack of spectacle, suspense or surprises, especially when you consider that the "Ragnarok" trailer featured all its biggest action bits. If you arrive expecting to be amazed by $180 million worth of moviemaking genius, you're better off just enjoying the preview online and getting your camp '80s graphics and tunes from the second season of "Stranger Things." Because that's free (thank you, former roommate, for never changing your Netflix password). GREGORY WAKEMAN

"Lady Bird"

Director: Greta Gerwig
Stars: Saoirse Ronan, Laurie Metcalf
Rating: R

Ready to feel good about women in Hollywood again? Yeah, we were, too. And the quietly beautiful performances by the title character, Saoirse Ronan, and her struggling-to-keep-it-all-together mother, played by the inimitable Laurie Metcalf — not to mention the spot-on writing by (also) director Greta Gerwig — culminate in a coming-of-age movie that will win a barrel of Oscars. The relationships are precise, the topics are moving,and we can all relate to a teenager who doesn't know exactly who she is or where she wants to be, apart from being certain it's anyplace but here. STX FILMS

"A Bad Moms Christmas"

Director: Scott Moore, Jon Lucas
Stars: Mila Kunis, Kristen Bell, Kathryn Hahn

While "A Bad Moms Christmas" might lack any tact or subtlety in its jokes and stab at sentimentality, it still produces enough laughs and heart. It helps that the cast of moms' moms (Christine Baranski, Cheryl Hines and especially Susan Sarandon) are perfectly cast alongside the original trio. The fact that it is set at Christmas doesn't make the film as warm or effective as it could've been; it doesn't stand-out like its predecessor. But ultimately "A Bad Moms Christmas" aims low and just about delivers, which is all one could really expect from the franchise. You'll forget this film long before you start poking around boxes looking for your holiday decorations. GW

3 things to watch for as Giants start second half

Go to the Darkwa side

The numbers don't need to be gaudy. In fact, behind that offensive line, they likely won't be. But the Giants need to establish a table of talent at the running back position. Paul Perkins has struggled this year and the most promising player out of the backfield is Orleans Darkwa. Give the little-used running back some run and reps to see if he can be a possible answer to the running woes or possibly even a component for next year.

The Giants don't need to find lightning in a bottle, merely someone who shows promise. The offensive line will be overhauled this offseason so if there is potential, that player could emerge to be the feature back next year.

Go all in on the young guys

The Giants have some promising young pieces on their team, ranging from the aforementioned Perkins to last year's draft picks such as Darian Thompson, B.J. Goodson and players this year such as first-round pick Evan Engram and defensive linemen Dalvin Thompson, a fellow rookie.

These players are going to be the future of this franchise and a big part of the youth movement in the future. Time to expand their roles and see what they can do, even if it is at the expense of established veterans who take a much bigger chunk of the salary cap.

WEEK 9 vs. RAMS
Sunday at 1 p.m. on FOX

Don't coach for now

The tendency of a head coach in this position will be to try and eek out a few wins, no matter what it might take to do so — all done solely to try and enhance job security. But Ben McAdoo has to be willing to think outside the box here. This year is now all about 2018, with the Giants needing to establish depth and young talent. They'll need answers moving forward and the rest of this year should provide that.

If McAdoo wins a few games with his veterans, then what does he prove? This team was supposed to be a playoff team. But if he can hang in games and get a couple wins with the new, young guys then maybe he can save his job. It'd certainly be more impressive than the one win he has right now. KRISTIAN DYER

Dave Eiland will join the New York Mets' staff as pitching coach after a seven-year stint with the Kansas City Royals where he won a MLB title. GETTY IMAGES

Mets coaching staff beginning to take shape

The New York Mets wasted little time cleaning out most of their coaching staff once a disappointing 2017 season came to an end.

After their final game of the season, former manager Terry Collins stepped down after the last game of the year and has since been replaced by former Cleveland Indians pitching coach Mickey Callaway.

Having interviewed for the job and not receiving it, hitting coach Kevin Long is not staying with the Mets. The same goes for first-base coach Tom Goodwin and bench coach Dick Scott.

Over the past 24 hours though, the Mets have filled two of those vacancies as they start rebuilding their staff.

On Wednesday, New York promoted Pat Roessler to hitting coach after spending the past three seasons as Long's assistant. The two also worked together with the crosstown-rival Yankees.

Thursday morning saw the team hire Dave Eiland as their pitching coach, as first reported by Marc Carig of Newsday, filling the void left by Warthen's departure.

The 51-year-old spent the last seven seasons with the Kansas City Royals at the same position, helping the team win a pair of American League pennants while defeating the Mets in the 2015 World Series. He was also the pitching coach of the Yankees when they won the World Series in 2009.

Eiland and Callaway also have connections, both pitching for the Tampa Bay Devil Rays during the 1999 season.

It's those pitching minds that will be tasked in combining to help fix a Mets pitching staff — which so much of the team's success is relied upon — that underwhelmed last season, though much of it had to do with injuries.

The Mets are close to completing their coaching staff, but they still have to find a new first-base coach and bench coach. JOE PANTORNO

Aries A personal situation or partnership will be on shaky ground. A tendency to overreact or take your frustrations out on someone else will put you in a difficult position.

Taurus Plan something special with family, friends or a loved one. Taking a break will ease your stress and give you a chance to digest what's been going on around you.

Gemini You'll be tempted to take part in something questionable. Show strength and discipline to avoid a situation that could put you in a compromising position.

Cancer Be up-front about what you are willing to contribute. Helping others will only be satisfying if you see that your contribution makes a difference.

Leo Situations will escalate quickly. Don't let your emotions take the reins and get you into trouble with your employer or a loved one. Keep the peace and do what's expected.

Virgo Take care of personal business and any family or home responsibilities first. Recognizing problems before they get too big will help counter a negative outcome.

Libra Physical alterations will give you a boost. A change to your lifestyle or to a relationship you cherish will help bring you closer to a stable and secure future.

Scorpio Keep a sound mind and a positive attitude. If you overreact, you will face opposition that will make it difficult for you to accomplish what you set out to do.

Sagittarius You'll be tempted to engage in something because of someone else, but before you do, get all the particulars, including what it will cost emotionally and financially.

Capricorn Look for a way to expand your living space or add a work station that will encourage you to develop your skills, learn something new or pursue a new hobby.

Aquarius Don't spend money you don't have. Emotional conflict will surface if someone is counting on you for something you cannot deliver.

Pisces Take advantage of an opportunity to make some extra cash. Making a worthwhile investment will encourage you to handle your cash more efficiently. EUGENIA LAST
